What is Photometal?

An industrial quality process that permanently reproduces an image below the surface of anodized aluminum. The image produced is scratch and fade resistant and comes in a variety of gouges (thicknesses), ranging from .008 through .125 of an inch.

Photometal still remains the best way to permanently reproduce photographs, drawings, documents and old newspaper articles. It is not only used to create attractive awards, but also creative signage and nameplates for industrial and commercial usage. The list of potential clients that you can approach is virtually unlimited.

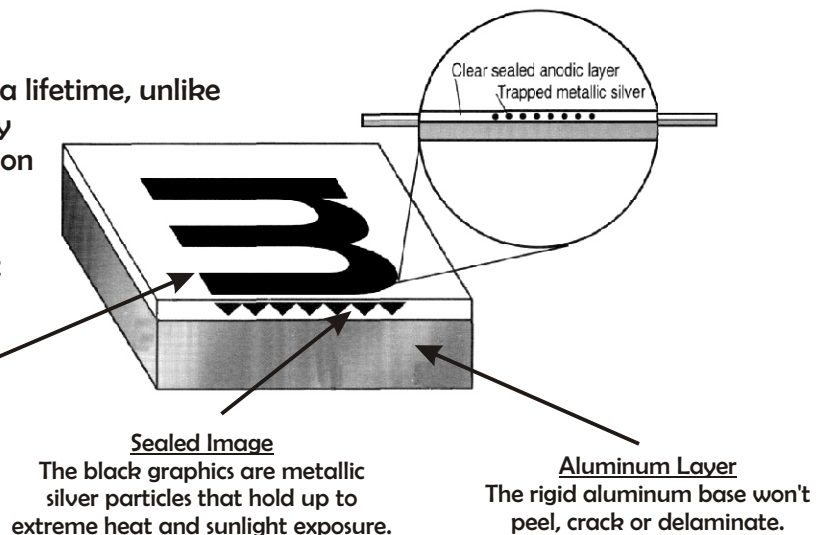

Over time the product may be subjected to any or all of the following conditions without harm to the product: direct sunlight, intense heat, handling, abrasion, dirt, grime, solvents, fuels, paint, impact, graffiti, salt spray, blowing sand, moisture and extreme cold.

The Right Choice & Why:

- Most chemicals roll off photometal plates with no effects.
- Photometal doesn't fade... Even the super fine text and graphics withstand the most violent extremes!
- Photometal parts won't peel or delaminate because the image is embedded with a super hard-anodized layer.

Why Photometal Lasts a Lifetime!

Photometal plates will look as good as new for a lifetime, unlike sublimation or other processes that imprint directly on the surface. That's because the information is sealed directly into the anodized layer of the aluminum. In addition, imbedded black graphics are actually metallic silver particles that resist heat and sunlight. As a result, major industry groups recognize photometal parts as the most durable
